

Enjoy insurance insights with our new newsletter

At NPRE, we continue to take a closer look at potential: backing opportunities that sit beyond traditional markets, building enduring partnerships, and applying senior judgement to complex and developing risks. As an independent reinsurer, our focus is not simply on providing capacity, but on creating responsive, long-term solutions for cedents, MGAs, intermediaries and partners whose ambitions require a more considered approach. Over the coming months, we will continue to introduce new leadership as part of NPRE's continued evolution, bringing fresh perspectives while remaining grounded in the enduring partnerships that define how we work.

News & views

In our latest insights, we look at two themes at the heart of NPRE's current thinking: how smaller businesses can take a measured first step toward captive ownership, and what it really means to operate as a lean independent (re)insurer.

Starting Small: The SME Captive Potential explores how captives do not need to be an all-or-nothing proposition. For small and mid-sized businesses, a staged approach can offer a realistic route into retaining risk, building data, accumulating capital and working toward greater independence over time.

What "lean" really means at an independent reinsurer considers how independence can create fewer layers between the risk and the decision. At NPRE, lean does not mean cutting back on expertise; it means structuring the business so experienced underwriters and analysts can stay close to each submission and apply judgement where standard models may fall short.

Meet the team

In our newsletter we say hello to Joyce Powell-Broadbelt, who has joined NPRE's executive team after serving as Company Secretary.

She shares her journey from Company Secretary to Non-Executive Director and reflects on almost seven years with NPRE. She discusses the company's growth, the experience she brings to the board, and the perspective she has gained by being part of NPRE's evolution.
